

Iri Plant Workers

er, said in a telephone Doe Run was surprised
a fine and believed that urges were unwarrant-

health citations from 10 years and we've
in making the smelter
15," Mr. Fitzsimmons

19 accused Doe Run of rotating contract emt of areas of high lead
nize blood lead levels.
tesman, Terry Mikel-ractice sidestepped
nts that employees
id blood levels be re-
-contaminated areas
tion of pay and bene-months while their turn to normal.

back wages and ssmised workers in
e determined, Mr.
ver levied by OSHA
st October against Bridgeport, Conn., that collapsed last
tration workers.
the agency fined
Bath, Me., $4.2 miln Works and the
ors are contesting

vative iocese

ver annulements pointments and
es in health care
stry to homosex-
ad accused the annulements and
ving communion
etting homosex-urches.

OBITUARIES

Alfred S. Eichner Is Dead at 50; A Key Post-Keynesian Economist

Alfred S. Eichner, a leading member of the post-Keynesian school of economics and a professor at Rutgers University, died of a heart attack Wednesday in Closter, N.J., where he lived. He was 50 years old.

Dr. Eichner suffered the attack while playing racquetball. He was pronounced dead at Pascack Valley Hospital in Westwood.

A native of Washington, he was a graduate of Columbia College and received his doctorate in economics from Columbia, where he taught from 1962 until 1971. He headed the economics department at the State University of New York in Purchase from 1971 to 1980 and joined the Rutgers faculty the following year.

Dr. Eichner edited several books, including "A Guide to Post-Keynesian Economics" and "Why Economics Is Not Yet a Science," both published in 1983 by M. E. Sharpe. His latest book, "The Macrodynamics of Advanced Market Economies," is to be published this year, also by M. E. Sharpe.

'One of the Best Teachers'

He was a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Post-Keynesian Economics and he lectured widely and testified before Congressional and other legislative committees.

With Eli Ginsberg, a professor of economics at Columbia, Dr. Eichner wrote an economic history of black Americans, "The Troublesome Presence: The American Democracy and the Negro," published in 1964 by Free Press. Dr. Ginsberg recalled Dr. Eichner this week as "a first-rate historian and one of the best teachers" of economics.

As a leader of the post-Keynesian school, a small but influential group of economists in Britain and the United States, Dr. Eichner sought to go beyond the theories of John Maynard Keynes, who advocated government intervention in the free market and public spending to increase employment.

In the view of Dr. Eichner and his colleagues, investment is the key to economic expansion. He advocated a government incomes policy to prevent inflationary wage and price settlements as an adjunct to the customary fiscal and monetary means of regulating the economy.

Dr. Eichner is survived by his wife, Barbara; their sons, Matthew and James, both of Closter; two brothers, Martin, of Palo Alto, Calif., and Stanley, of Boston, and a sister, Belle Joyce Kass of Chicago.

Margaret M. Heyman

Professor, 77

Margaret M. Heyman, a social worker and retired professor at Hunter College who researched industrial programs on alcoholism, died of a cerebral hemorrhage last Sunday at New York Hospital. She was 77 years old and lived in Manhattan.

She was born in Central Islip, L.I., and was a supervisor in the New York City Department of Welfare.

She joined the faculty at Hunter in 1964, retiring in 1972 to serve as principal investigator and project director for a national study on alcohol programs in industry.

There are no immediate survivors.

Anthony Streuli, 43, A CBS News Producer

BEDFORD, N.H., Feb. 12 (AP) — Anthony Streuli, a longtime newsman for CBS who was in New Hampshire directing the network's coverage of a presidential primary, died in his hotel room today, the network announced. He was 43 years old.

Mr. Streuli had been the Boston producer for CBS News since April 1986. He joined the radio network as a news-writer in 1969, and worked on the CBS Morning News and CBS Evening News programs and as assistant bureau chief in London.

Mr. Streuli, a Boston resident, apparently died of natural causes, according to a network spokesman, Tom Goodman. No autopsy was performed, Mr. Goodman said.

A 1966 Colgate University graduate, Mr. Streuli was born in Zurich, and worked for the Armed Forces Radio Network before joining CBS.

He is survived by three brothers: Peter, of Lausanne, Switzerland; Konrad, of Bolton, Mass.; and Mark, of Stowe, Vt.

Henry J. Kelley

Professor, 62

Henry J. Kelley, the Christopher C. Kraft Professor of Aerospace and Ocean Engineering at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, died of a heart attack Tuesday at his home in Blacksburg, Va. He was 62 years old.

Professor Kelley was associated with the Grumman Aerospace Corporation and the Analytical Mechanics Associates Corporation.

He is survived by his wife, Maureen; a son, Henry B., of San Francisco, and a daughter, Maureen Elizabeth Kelley of Blacksburg.

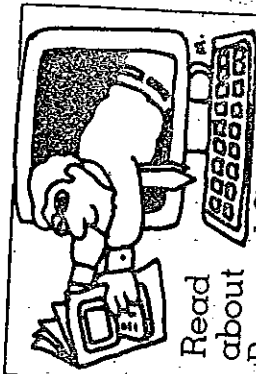

John Flynn Yachtsman, 79

Special to The New York Times

NEWPORT, R.I., Feb. 12 — John Flynn, a yachtsman and retired boat yard manager associated with several America's Cup campaigns, died of cancer today at Newport Hospital. He was 79 years old.

Mr. Flynn, a member of the Newport Yacht Club, was a former manager of the Newport Shipyard and supervised construction of the 12-Meter American Eagle, an America's Cup defense contender in 1964.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy; two sons, John Jr. of Washington, and William of Mount Clemens, Mich.; a brother, Nell of Newport, and five granddaughters and three great-granddaughters.

Read about Personal Computers and Peripherals. Every Tuesday in Science Times The New York Times

Drathis

BARNETT—Claude D., Jr., Formerly of Lawrence E. and later of Walnut Creek, CA passed away on January 29, 1988. We loved and admired Claude as a husband, father, friend, partner and grandson of Samuel and...

Drathis

GOLDBERG—Michael, Joseph, On Feb. 11, 1988, Cherished son of Marc and Beth Goldberg, brother of Laura and Leslie, beloved father, friend, partner and...

Drathis

Barnett, Claude
Bruno, Rudolf
Busby, Douglas
Jacobson, Joseph
Kates, Stanley
Krimshorn, Elva

Drathis

ROSE, On February 11, 1988, Beloved wife of the late...
SALTZMAN—Rose, On February 11, 1988, Beloved wife of the late...
Drathis